Conference: Morning, September 29, 2013(Sunday)

Venue: Vanda VIP 1

08:30-08:40	Opening Remarks Prof. James K. Ho Information & Decision Sciences in the College of Business Administration at the University of Illinois at Chicago, USA
08:40-09:20	Keynote SpeakerSpeech1 Prof. James K. Ho Information & Decision Sciences in the College of Business Administration at the University of Illinois at Chicago, USA Title: Synergy between Information and Operations Management in Business Education, Research and Innovation Abstract: While Information Systems (IS, also known as Management Information Systems (MIS); Information Technology Management; or simply Information Management) and Operations Management (or closely related variations under Quantitative Methods, Operations Research and Management Science), are often housed under the same department in many universities, they are in variably considered distinct academic disciplines. We show that this conventional schism has led to remarkable set back and missed opportunities through the as yet relatively short though eventful history in the adoption of information technology. It explains the early resistance to change through the blind faith leading to the bursting of the Internet bubble. And true synergy between the two disciplines is finally resulting in sound foundations for business education, research and innovation.
09:20-10:00	Keynote SpeakerSpeech2 Prof. Ruth Alas

	Estonian Business School Title: Crisis Management in Chinese Organizations: How to Benefit from Crisis? Abstract: This presentation provides the theoretical framework on how to manage crises in organizations based on survey results in Chinese organizations. The Chinese economy has continued to grow despite the economic downturn in most countries in Europe and North America. This fact makes it especially interesting for the study of crisis management in Chinese organizations.

Gerwel Proches Abstract: The study aimed at investigating the leadership styles utilized by women project managers in the Eskom Enterprise Division and why it is that so few reach top positions. In-depth, semi-structured interviews were conducted with 15 female project managers and thematic analysis was then used. Certain leadership styles and characteristics were identified as being critical for successful project management. The characteristics that these women project managers exhibit described qualities of transformational, democratic and people-oriented leadership styles. They did not believe that gender should be a determinant of their style, but that working as a project manager required certain leadership skills and competencies to meet the project’s objectives irrespective of gender. Some of the barriers identified were: gender stereotyping, lack of qualifications, fear of not succeeding, family responsibilities and lack of networking skills and time.
